RE: Meridian's Response to the Coronavirus Pandemic

Dear Meridian Bioscience Customers,

Everyone in the world is being impacted greatly by the Coronavirus Pandemic. The team of nearly 700 people at Meridian Bioscience, in both our Life Science and Diagnostics businesses, are working tirelessly to support the fight against this global pandemic.

In many areas around the globe, local, state, and federal governments are instituting "Shelter in Place" directives in response to the Coronavirus Pandemic. These significant acts are being implemented to proactively and aggressively manage the spread of the Coronavirus outbreak. Our business at Meridian has been deemed an essential business, which means that we remain open and working to deliver for our healthcare customers.

- Our team in the Life Science Business is working day and night to make key components that are key ingredients of other Diagnostics Company's Coronavirus tests. At the same time, the Life Science Team remains committed to delivering, as always, on all the products we manufacture to support global health.
- Our Diagnostics Business is committed to the continuity of supply of all our key diagnostics products, with an increased focus to deliver much needed Respiratory Testing products to customers around the globe.
- While our businesses are driving to support our customers, we are taking every precaution to keep our employees safe. A large number of our employees are working from home; we are driving social distancing practices and ensuring anyone not feeling well remain at home and focus on their recovery. We are committed to keeping our employees safe and delivering for our customers in this time of global need.

The team at Meridian is monitoring the Coronavirus Pandemic on a daily basis to make sure our priorities of keeping everyone safe and continued supply to all of our customers without interruption are met. To date, Meridian has not experienced any significant shortages in the supply of raw materials for our manufacturing needs. We will continue to work closely with our suppliers and all our customers to reduce risk of supply issues.

The team at Meridian remains committed to supporting our customers around the globe during this time of need. We will continue to develop and build high quality products with a focus on continuity of supply as we manage through this global pandemic.
